

Have you considered a career as a Clinical Physiologist (Dialysis)?

Graduate study ensures ongoing career development and competency, helping you stay current with new technology and advances in your field.

If you hold a bachelor's degree with science courses continue your development with our new Graduate Diploma in Health Science and Technology (Dialysis).

Dialysis requirements are increasing. This programme will provide people with the necessary skills for this service.

National health need predictions have forecasted a long-term increase for the need for dialysis, and to train more physiologists to meet the demand.

This programme prepares you with the knowledge and practical experience to meet the competencies for Clinical Physiologist (Dialysis) as set by the New Zealand Board of Dialysis Practice (NZBDP). You will then be eligible for certification with the NZBDP, by passing the appropriate exam on completion of the programme.

To step up to the challenge, contact Faculty of Nursing and Health Studies.
